Frequently Asked Questions

Are there any preparations I need to make prior to my appointment?

It is best not to eat for at least 60 minutes before your treatment. Also, do not drink any alcohol, and let your therapist know of any new medications you have taken that day.

What can I expect on my first visit?

On your first visit you will complete a confidential health history form, which your therapist will go over with you to determine your treatment needs and goals. Your therapist will also conduct an assessment so as to find specific areas on your body that need focus, and to see if there are any risks or contra-indications to your treatment that need to be avoided.

Must I undress for my massage?

Massage may be done through your clothes if you choose, but certain techniques are more effective when applied directly to the skin. During the massage you will be draped, and only one area will be uncovered at a time, and then re-draped.

I bruise easily; can I still get a massage?

Your therapist will work within your comfort level. Unless there is an underlying condition which causes the bruising, massage is not a risk to you.

Am I expected to talk during the massage?

It is your choice whether or not you wish to talk during your massage. However, your therapist will need your feedback on pain and other health information.

After my treatment, is there anything I need to have on hand or anything specific I should do?

A drink of water is recommended after the treatment to flush out any toxins released by the body during the treatment and to keep your tissues hydrated. An Epsom salt bath is also recommended to soothe and calm muscles, and enhance the benefits of the massage.
